Program Planning: "I've Got Something on My Mind"

In preparation for brainstorming and prioritizing program topics and activities for the coming 12 months, Pasadena Citizens' Advisory Council (PCAC) members and visitors worked in small groups to share industry-related issues on their minds and those of their family, friends, neighbors, and coworkers. They reviewed pages of PCAC history and the program input or plans from similar advisory councils. They then noted some of the topics they wanted to raise during the brainstorming exercise.

Groups then called out topics to be listed on flip charts and received sticky dots to spend on those they most want to cover in the coming year. Topping the list of 19 program topics were an update from Air Alliance Houston on a study they did recently in Pasadena; an update on workforce needs resulting from an aging workforce; and transportation of chemicals by rail.

A Program Planning Committee will draft a plan for 2018-2019 based on the input and bring it to PCAC for approval at an upcoming meeting. The plan will then be used to construct PCAC meeting agendas and schedule tours.
