WORKFORCE DEVELOPMENT PROGRAMS

- The last of 4 programs on workforce development in this Program Plan will be a review of the various programs to interest students and others in industry jobs. Dani Grant of EHCMA's Workforce Committee will briefly describe the programs.
- Members also wish to know what programs there are in the Pasadena area to encourage girls to enter jobs in the fields of Science, Technology, Engineering, and Math (STEM). Grant will be asked to cover this.
- Members have a particular interest in internship programs. They would like PCAC plants that have internship programs to briefly describe them; e.g. LyondellBasell, Port of Houston, others. They want to encourage more plants to set up internships and similar programs and would like to know what it would take for more to be established.
- Members are interested in the array of jobs needed in industry: engineers, operators, maintenance crafts, administrative support, construction, etc. They also are interested in jobs for students just entering the workforce as well as retraining workers to become industry workers.
- Community members will offer advice about how to get out the message that there are good jobs available in local industry.

- Facilitator Diane Sheridan will talk about the founding of Pasadena Citizens' Advisory Council as a means of providing community-industry dialogue around industry-related issues, as encouraged by the chemical industry's Responsible Care Program.
- All plants will be asked to share 3 highlights of their community relations (good deed) programs. Plants will be asked to cover the kind of programs that serve community organizations, the city, the school district, and other categories like this.
- They will consider financial support, volunteer time, leadership positions on boards and committees, and any other category of community relations support.
- Plants will say whether they have a full-time community relations manager and, if not, how they handle community relations.
- Plants are to explain whether they have a set budget for community relations each year.
- They will explain how an organization applies for support from that plant, describing whether it is a formal or informal process. They will explain how people can find out about the application process.
- In small group discussion, community members will be asked to describe community needs with which they are familiar. The input will be captured in the meeting notes for those plants that would like the information.
